THE SOCIETY

The New Hampshire Historical Society regards the city of Portsmouth as its birthplace, and the date as May 20, 1823. There is a record of an earlier meeting of certain of its friends at Exeter on March 13 of the same year. The Society's charter is dated June 13, 1823, and its home has been in Concord since that date. It has always been fortunate in its membership. On the early records are, among others, the names of Jeremiah Mason, Levi Woodbury, Ichabod Bartlett, and Nathaniel A. Haven of Portsmouth, Oliver W. B. Peabody of Exeter, William Plumer of Epping, Joel Parker of Keene, and John Farmer and Jacob B. Moore of Concord. These men would impart character and impetus to any undertaking. All had scholarly tastes, and many of them were learned in the law. In 1823 Levi Woodbury was Governor of the State, and he was afterwards Secretary of the Navy, Secretary of the Treasury, and a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; William Plumer had been Governor; Ichabod Bartlett was then a member of Congress; Jeremiah Mason had been a United States Senator; Joel Parker was afterward Chief Justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, and Oliver W. B. Peabody was a poet of no small fame. Of them all none was more useful and more resourceful in forwarding the objects of the Society than John Farmer, the genial apothecary, and Jacob B. Moore, the publisher and printer. The work of these two in historical directions is well known. The first gift to the library of the Society was a volume from Mr. Moore. The first considerable gift of money was the sum of twenty dollars from Levi Woodbury.

At first it was intended to limit the membership of the Society to fifty resident and fifty honorary members, but this purpose was afterward enlarged. In the few succeeding years up to 1840 the records show, among others, as resident members, Matthew Harvey, Samuel D. Bell, Nathaniel P. Rogers, Isaac Hill, Nathaniel G. Upham, Philip Carrigain, William H. Y. Hackett, Nathan Lord, Jermiah Smith, Ira Perley, Asa McFarland, and Nathaniel Bouton, and as honorary members Nathaniel H. Carter, Joseph E. Worcester, Lewis Cass, and George Bancroft.

Hon. William Plumer was the first President of the Society, John Farmer, Recording Secretary, and Jacob B. Moore its first Librarian.

At the early meeting in Portsmouth a constitution was adopted, which provided that "the objects of the Society shall be to discover, procure, and preserve whatever may relate to the natural, civil, ecclesiastical, and literary history of the United States in general, and of this State in particular."

The income of the Society for the first year of its existence was one hundred and fifteen dollars, made up of nineteen membership fees and the gift from Hon. Levi Woodbury which is above mentioned.

Ten years after its beginning the Society's library was in an upper room of the south wing of the State House, and its annual meetings were then and afterward held either in the Senate Chamber or the Council Room. It was an early custom to have an annual public address of historical or biographical character delivered in the hall of the House of Representatives. These interesting addresses, many of which have been printed in the Society's Collections, have since been more frequent, and the place of delivery has finally become the Society's own premises.

The income of the Society has never been large, and the expenses have been kept within suitable limits. In 1841 copies of its charter, by-laws, and list of members were furnished gratuitously by a Concord printer. A debt of one hundred dollars, created on some hopeful occasion, existed for several years, but was paid in 1859 by a gift of that sum from Hon. Samuel D. Bell. There was discussion for a long time about building a suitable fence around the monument on the Hopkinton road, entrusted to the Society by Hon. Richard Bradley, which marks the locality of the fight with the Indians in 1746, but finally the fence was built, about 1870, from funds provided by Mrs. Harvey Jewell, a daughter of Mr. Bradley.

In 1874 the membership of the Society included one hundred and thirty-seven active resident members; and in 1884 the library was found to contain more than ten thousand volumes. A very considerable accession came to the library in June, 1873, as the gift of Hon. Charles H. Bell, being books by New Hampshire authors or printed by New Hampshire printers. In 1877 Hon. Lorenzo Sabine, a native of Lisbon, N. H., author of "Loyalists of the American Revolution," died in Massachusetts. It appeared by an unexecuted codicil to his will that it was his purpose to bequeath his library to the Society. This purpose was afterwards confirmed and executed by his heirs. There have been other valued gifts, antiquities, autographs, books, coins, portraits, and Revolutionary relics from various individual friends.

The library now contains about twenty-five thousand volumes, also very many pamphlets and manuscripts, and files of New Hampshire newspapers, bound and unbound.

The library, only, has been moved into the new building, the relics and curiosities remaining in the old building, which is still the property of the Society. It is planned to repair and equip the old building for use as a museum of antiquities, all three floors to be devoted to that purpose. Such an institution will undoubtedly attract many notable collections now in private possession, and will become a very interesting and instructive feature of the work of the Society. The work of fitting the building for this purpose will begin as soon as the resources of the Society will permit.

THE BUILDING

The New Hampshire Historical Society building has been given an unusually appropriate architectural design. The building, primarily a library in character, an athenæum in fact, also expresses the dignity of a home for art, and a meeting place for lectures and for research.

First of all there is a quality of permanence, without and within the structure, in the restrained beauty and dignity of the design, the materials, and the decorative treatment. The building is Greek in spirit and in detail. It is not archaic, however, neither does it express any passing style or modern fancy. It is entirely appropriate for its uses, an inspiration to those who know the building, and to those who avail themselves of the opportunities it affords.

The elements, and even time itself, cannot harm the work. The exterior is of granite, cut from Rattlesnake Hill in the Capital City. Daniel Chester French, in the monumental sculpture over the grand entrance, carved from the same granite, tells the story of ancient and modern research which the Society and the structure typify. The sculpture, conceived and executed in the same spirit, fulfills and crowns the beauty and dignity of the whole.

Massive bronze grilles form this entrance. The central rotunda is built of Old Convent Grey Sienna marble, a material of great beauty, quarried by monks from the only known deposit in the world of this material. The arches and vaults, even the ceiling, are of this marble. The whole rotunda design is impressive in its simplicity.

The great stairway leading to the stack room and to the exhibition hall is of Hauteville marble, adorned with railings and lamp standards of bronze. The rotunda on the second floor is constructed throughout in Caen stone.

The entire west wing of the building is devoted to the library of the Society, and is complete in every requirement. The main reading room is large, well lighted, and of very pleasing proportions and detail. The books are in bronze stacks arranged in a series of alcoves. Over the fireplace in this room is the contributors' tablet of white marble, where, in bronze letters, are inscribed the names of those who have given distinguished study to historical research, and also the names of men and women who have contributed toward the purchase of the land and the maintenance of the institution.

In the basement are the newspaper room and the shipping room; at the left of the main entrance of the building is the Superintendent's office, and at the right, the Trustees' room.

In the east wing is the lecture room, with marble paneled platform and mahogany furniture, while above is the large, top-lighted, tile-paved exhibition room. On this floor are several apartments designed for special exhibitions and loan collections.

The lighting fixtures, designed in keeping with the character of the building, are of bronze. The furnishings are of mahogany, designed in harmony with all else, and making complete a building admirable in every detail.

On the marble wall facing the grand stairway has been placed a beautiful tablet, the gift of Benjamin A. Kimball, dedicated to Edward Tuck in commemoration of his generosity to the Society. This tablet exhibits workmanship of the finest taste and skill; its composition is of bronze, enriched with dark and antique color. The design represents an aged student recording history, having on his right the lamp of knowledge and a palm branch, and on his left an hour glass and an olive branch.

On the right, as one enters the impressive rotunda, is a bronze bust of Amos Tuck, while opposite, on the left, is a similar bust of his son, Edward, the donor of the building. Amos Tuck was a life-long citizen of New Hampshire, and a man of much distinction. He was one of the original Free Soil Democrats, leaving the party because of its policy respecting slavery, and becoming a founder of the Republican party, whose name he suggested as early as 1853. Six years in Congress, from 1847 to 1853, comprised his legislative career, but his political influence continued to the end of his life.

Edward Tuck, benefactor of this Society, was born in Exeter August 24, 1842, prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, and graduated from Dartmouth College in the class of 1862.

Mr. Tuck began the study of law in his father's office at Exeter, but was obliged to discontinue it because of temporary trouble with his eyes, for which reason he went abroad in the following year. While completing medical treatment in Switzerland he received, in June, 1864, the appointment of Consular Clerk, and was ordered to report to Hon. John Bigelow, United States Consul in Paris, for examination for the post. He entered the consular service there, and after the promotion, in 1865, of Mr. Bigelow to be United States Minister, Mr. Tuck was made Vice-Consul, and for five months was acting Consul. He resigned his position in May, 1866, and returned to the United States, having accepted a proposition from the firm of Munroe & Co., of Paris, to enter the service of their New York house, John Munroe & Co., which he did on August 1, 1866. He became a partner in the firm in 1871, and retired from active business January 1, 1881.

Mr. Tuck's business necessitated frequent trips to Paris, and since his retirement he has lived in that beautiful city the greater part of the time, though still continuing his New York domicile and interests.

He married in Paris April 23, 1872, Miss Julia Stell, who has always been an active adviser and helper in the wise and liberal philanthropy of her husband.

The character of Mr. Tuck is shown in his great public benefactions at home and abroad, and no other man knows of his many private gifts. To Dartmouth College he has given large sums, all directed to practical ends. He was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1905 and promoted to Officier in 1912.

Two marble busts in the niches of the upper rotunda are the gifts of Mr. and Mrs. Tuck. One is a fine Franklin, which, if not actually by the hand of Caffieri, is certainly an early copy, and a work of great artistic merit. The other is a bust of William Shorter Stell, father of Mrs. Tuck. Mr. Stell was born in Philadelphia in 1800, and while a young man went to Manchester, England, where he became a prominent and successful merchant. He retired from commercial life in 1850, and died in London in 1863. An ardent and outspoken Union man during our Civil War, and in almost daily conflict with old English friends, he abated no opinion, nor left unspoken his hostility to the Confederacy. Mr. Stell was an intimate friend of John Bright, Richard Cobden, George Peabody, Charles Francis Adams, and Junius S. Morgan, and to many distinguished countrymen traveling in England he showed generous hospitality.

Between these busts is a copy in plaster of Houdon's bust of Lafayette, the original of which stands over the entrance of the Assembly Hall at Versailles. This is a gift to the Society from Benjamin A. Kimball.

The building, magnificent in its simplicity, is adorned by a group of statuary occupying a prominent place over the impressive entrance. The sculptor is Daniel Chester French, a native of Exeter. The group consists of two figures, male and female, kneeling on either side of a shield bearing the seal of the Society, and surmounted by an ornamental finial, of which the chief feature is an owl as the symbol of Wisdom. The aged female figure on the right represents Ancient History. She holds in her right hand a skull, symbolizing the dead past, and is studying a tablet, upon which her left hand rests, the tablet representing the records of the past. The figure of a youth on the left represents Modern History as the genius of Discovery. His right hand rests on a globe, and he studies a scroll which lies on his knee.

The seal which appears on the shield between the two figures has in its center an open book, with a torch, representing Learning and the transmission of it; above is the radiation of Light, and below is the skull of an Indian, with feathered head-dress. Branches of the apple and the pine surround the skull as symbols of cultivation and wilderness, and an Indian arrow-head appears below.

The building is one hundred and fifty feet in length and ninety feet in width, including the massive pavilions. Constructed of ten-cut Concord granite, Greek in design and spirit, with details of the Doric order, situated on a site bounded by State, Park, Green and Center Streets, with the State House, Federal building, State Library, and the City Hall close at hand, the New Hampshire Historical Society, through the generosity of its benefactor, possesses a perfect and complete structure, equally beautiful within and without.
